

For those interested in solar energy, the SOLAR MISER® Window Energy Meter measures the gains and losses of energy (net energy flow) through a window.

The SOLAR MISER enables you to translate the amount of energy that flows in and out of your windows into an approximate dollar amount. This information can then assist you in evaluating your home's solar energy potential while also helping take advantage of the passable energy capabilities of your windows.

SOLAR MISER Window Energy Meters have been recognized as “technologically sound” by the United States National Bureau of Standards.

To use: place on a mount with the back of the SOLAR MISER flush with the window (shown at left) or mounted directly onto the window (shown below).
